Jill Hindman, Jim Queen and Bea Lyons are still working with the City regarding the Bylaws

Jill Hindman and Dr. Rader are looking into the possibility of establishing a roster of names of people who might be available to give attendant care. The OMA is working on a handbook of agencies for the disabled community. Bea Lyons pointed out that United way with their 211 has an extensive resource guide that’s available for about $30.00.

The Tennessee Public Transit Association's conference held a seminar which introduced Dr. Rader's concept on stigma for individuals with disabilities. Dr. Rader, Sandra Booher, Jill Hindman and Pam Jackson participated as panelist. The members of the panel received numerous compliments for the discussion from the higher echelons of management all the way down to the drivers. Next year the conference will be held in Memphis. Carta Caravan won first place in the bus rodeo that they have for the state, which is a very big deal and Jim Queen, is most pleased with this honor.

TCSW: Jill Hindman reported that even though the group was small, those in attendance were quite interested in the discussions. Transportation problems were discussed as well as emergency preparedness. Jill Hindman and Bea Lyons were panelists for the special needs session.

GO!FEST:

Suggestions were made that might make the event draw more people, i.e., a corporate sponsor, more publicity. What also is needed is one headliner (Act) that will draw people to the event. Captioning was missing and needs to be added to the program.

The Council now has a mailbox set up at City Hall. The address is as follows:

Mayor's Council on Disability

200 City Hall Annex
